RAID ON BOOTLEGGERS

Federal Officials Take Sixteen Men From Southbound Steam Trains Last Night For Violating Reed Law —Thirteen Held.

Raids were made last night by agents of the Department of Justice on a number of southbound steam trains on persons charged with violting the provisions of the Reed law by transporting liquor interstate.

About sixteen men, all bound for southern points, thirteen of whom were colored, were taken in custody during the night and the agents also confiscated about 100 quarts of liquor alleged to be the property of those arrested.

The parties accused by the agents of violating the provisions of the law were arraigned before United States Commissioner William P. Woolls late last night, and all except three were held for the action of the United States Court for the eastern district of Virginia. In default of bail those held were committed to jail. It is expected, however, that some of those arrested will later arrange for bail.

The parties arrested were taken in raids made by the agents on three trains bound for the south.

This is the first raid that has been made by the federal authorities here for violating the provisions of the Reed law for many months and it came as a genuine surprise to those arrested.

Previous to this all arrests that have been made were those made by the state officials and they were accordingly tried under the state law. Bootleggers are having trying times these days dodging both federal and state officials.

RICHMOND THEATRE REOPENS ON MONDAY

The Richmond Theatre, which has been closed during the recent epidemic will reopen its doors on Monday with Douglas Fairbanks in his new artcraft photoplay, "He Comes Up Smiling," which created the original role of Jerry Martin a tramp, in the stage version produced in New York in 1914.

"He Comes Up Smiling," is the tale of a tramp, or rather a young chap who tires of existence as a bank clerk and elects to follow the life of a knight of the road. His adventures on the big highway, his contest with other tramps, his defeat of a stock market scheme and his final winning of the girl of his choice, are the elements of a story so mirth-provoking that it is said to exhaust even those who love to laugh and grow fat.

There will be a continuous performance starting at 2:15 p. m.

K. C. IN BIG WAR DRIVE

Comprehensive Campaign For Week of November 11—Work Done by Knights of Columbus Apreciated City's Part $30,000.

Members of the Knights of Columbus and all others working by direction of the National Catholic War Council, are preparing a comprehensive campaign for the United War Work fund. The immediate need for raising thirty thousand dollars in this city is shown by the large sums spent by the K. of C. This great war working organization has four hundred and sixty-eight secretaries in American training camps and cantonments. At these points one hundred and fifty buildings have been constructed, fifty-six are under course of construction and contracts are out for more. Appropriations have been made in every camp city to develop community service. Three hundred thousand dollars has been expended in New York City. A building costing five hundred thousand dollars was erected in Boston and proportionate amounts spent throughout the States. Alexandrians know that the Knights of Columbus are doing here at Lyceum Hall and at Camp Humphreys, their efforts are untiring and thoroughly appreciated by the soldiers and sailors.

The soldiers and sailors are away from home and the social surroundings to which they are accustomed and it is necessary that everyone help to support the Knights of Columbus and the other agencies now working to keep up the moral standard of the American Army and Navy.

The Committee of War Workers of this city will visit every place of business and every home in Alexandria during the week beginning November the eleventh and all will have an opportunity to subscribe to carry on the activities of the seven great organizations now calling for funds.

It is doubtless known in Berlin by now that the American soldier is a real fighting man. He goes into battle with a song on his lips and dies with a smile in his eyes. That's morale! That's the sort of thing General Pershing and Marshal Foch have been talking about. It is the thing that decides battles and wins wars. A letter from home helps to keep the morale of the man in uniform. Meeting the demands of the United War Work Campaign keeps up the morale of the Army and Navy. The Knights of Columbus and other organizations cannot continue the field workers here and in Europe without financial support. The backing of the people at home means that the soldier will be sure that he's right in fighting. It will mean that he is satisfied and happy. It will mean keeping him physically fit and morally clean and it will prepare him to meet any sacrifice to perpetuate his ideals.

Every man and woman wage earner should contribute at least one half of one days wages. Every person of income is expected to give proportionately.

Alexandria is asked to give thirty thousand dollars!

What will you give?

Your contribution to the United War Work Campaign supplies the comforts and influences of home to the boys "Over There."

100 PERSONS KILLED

Fearful Wreck on Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railroad—Fire Adds to Horrors — Many Passengers injured.

New York, Nov. 2.—Upwards of 100 deaths, according to police estimates, resulted last night from a rear-end collision of two elevated railroad trains on the Brighton Beach line of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company near the Lincoln road station. Scores of men, women and children passengers in the two crowded trains were injured. Several of the cars caught fire, adding to the panic and the casualties.

A "green" motorman was said to have been in charge of the rear train, a man unfamiliar with the run, who was given his post for the first time yesterday to replace a striking motorman. He was reported to have escaped in some manner, and Police Captain Kelly ordered officers to search for him.

District Attorney Lewis of Brooklyn late last night ordered the arrest of all officers of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

The wreck was the most disastrous in the city's history.

With the impact of the rapidly-moving rear train the cars were telescoped and some were up-ended; others collapsed like knives, firemen said.

All lights in both trains immediately went out.

Screams of women and children and hoarse cries of men were heard from all parts of the wrecked cars. Within a few moments flames broke out in several places, immeasurably adding to the horror and panic.

Many women and children, maimed and crippled, some unconscious others screaming shrilly from the agony they suffered, were borne to the street, and many men passengers who had been injured also were helped to a place of safety. Some of the passengers, injured and uninjured alike were drawn from the pinioning debris only with the greatest difficulty.

LITTLE CHILDREN FALL INTO WELL

This morning three small children—Morris Wingfield, Emma Wingfield and Bessie Duty—went to a store at King and Patrick streets and asked permission to enter the cellar and take some paper boxes piled there. Consent was granted and the little ones proceeded to the cellar. A few minutes later their cries attracted attention of passersby. They had fallen into a dry well, about twenty feet deep. One of the children attempted to take hold of the side of the well in order to keep from falling, but a brick which she clenched gave way and fell upon the the head of Morris Wingfield.

An alarm was sent to the station house when Sergt. Scott hastened to the scene. He was unable to procure a ladder, and suggested that he and some of the bystanders who were listening to the cries of the children form a human chain, and thus rescue the boy and girls from their terrifying predicament. The suggestion was adopted, and one clinging to the legs of the other the chain was soon formed upon which the little ones scrambled out of their prison. Their injuries were slight.

AMERICANS TAKE 3,000

Pershing's Army Attacks on Sixteen Mile Front, Making Deep Inroads in Enemy's Lines—Gain All Objectives.

With the American First Army, Nov. 1.—Pershing's First army attacked at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning on a front of twenty-five kilometers (nearly sixteen miles), extending from northwest of Grandpre eastward to the Meuse River.

Two hours of the most intense artillery bombardment preceded the new drive.

Our troops made deep inroads into the enemy lines and captured more than 3,000 prisoners.

Before noon they had gained their first objectives under schedule.

The French [illegible] army attacked at the same time over a front of 10 kilometers on our left.

This double drive is part of the great push started by the allied forces to the north yesterday, and a continuation of the American operations between the Meuse and the Argonne begun on September 26.

A few hours after the start one corps of Yankees had captured 2,500 prisoners, while another had taken 1,200. Among the latter was a girl in soldier's uniform. She gave the first definite confirmation of the persistent reports that German girls are acting as machine gunners.

ENTER DARDANELLES

Formidable Allied Fleet Proceeds Through Straits to Sea of Marmora —Constantinople the Objective of Entente.

London, Nov 2.—Into the Dardanelles and through them into the wide basin of the Sea of Marmora steamed a formidable allied fleet yesterday and from the forts along Turkey's Gibraltar flutter tonight the Union Jack, the Tricolor and the Italian banner.

Allied naval occupation of Constantinople is a matter of hours.

Many of the grim greyhounds that dredged their way through the straits took part in the memorable battle for their possession three years ago and still bear the scars. Many of the bluejackets lined up along deck as the fleet steamed past the ragged reefs of Gallipoli, where in that last unforgetable blood battle on those very reefs many thousands of their comrades forever returned.

It was a quiet, unpretentious affair, this voyage through the straits yesterday, but majestic and historic in its simplicity and significance.

And as Great Britain's peoples learned the news a sigh of gladness seemed to heave through the lands, which, put into words might mean, "They have not died in vain!"

It meant a whole nation's joyous satisfaction over the setting of the last score with the Ottoman foe. The fall of Kut-el-Amara was wiped out months ago by Allenby and Townshend himself had a hand in the settlements.

If there had been any doubts that the armistice terms accepted by the Porte meant Turkey's absolute, complete and unconditional surrender, they were removed by the publication of the conditions late.

ENTER THE DARDANELLES

About two years ago an interesting panorama was exhibited at the Elks' Hall in Alexandria. A large assemblage was present which watched the pictures with great interest. Some of the most perfect representations were the Dardanelles, the entrance from the Aegean Sea to the Sea of Marmora, and while the scenes were being so vividly portrayed our minds danced through history. We thought of Helle, from whom the Hellespont takes its name, and her fate; of Leander, who swam the straits (four miles wide) to pass evenings with Hero, the beautiful priestess of Venus, and his untimely end; the crossing of the Hellespont by Xerxes and Cyrus, and centuries later by Alexandria the Great. Those in the audience conversant with the history and traditions of the past were kept in pleasant reveries as the scenes were shifted.

The United States was not in the war at the time, but our sympathies were with the nations contesting Germany's purpose to master the world. The simmering Hellespont, Sea of Marmora and Constantinople were to be in the hands of the Teutons if their dreams crystalized. The allied fleet had attempted to force the Dardanelles, but their efforts proved futile, and eventually they were forced to back away and leave the Turks and their German instructors masters of the situation.

For many years in accordance, with treaties designed to maintain the balance of power, no men-of-war were allowed to pass through the Dardanelles into the Black Sea. This was aimed at Russia, which for a long time had coveted Constantinople, the acquisition of which would have made the Muscovies the most mighty people in the world.

Were Russia today fighting with the allies as she was at the beginning that nation would now lay claim to this city which stands at the most strategic point in the world. The Muscovite, however, under present conditions, cannot claim this city after the windup of the war.

The announcement today that the allied fleet had entered the Dardanelles on the way to Constantinople has sent thrills of joy throughout the civilized world.

The shades of Helle, Hero, Leander, Xerxes, Cyrus and Alexander may be looking down upon the triumphant allies who have redeemed the world and who are about to drive the last nail into the coffin of autocracy.

CHURCHES TO REOPEN

Alexandria's places of worship will be reopened tomorrow after having been closed four weeks. It is hoped all members and attendants have maintained their spirituality during this period by reading their Bibles and striving to keep in the strait and narrow way which leads to a better world.

During the past year and a half we have been listening to patriotic sermons and hearing the rendition of our national Hymn, "America." On the morning of the 14th of July, anniversary of the destruction of the Bastile in Paris during the birth of freedom in France the organ in the Second Presbyterian Church pealed forth with the "Marseillaise," as a prelude to the services. The tri-colored flag was being fluttered by gentle zephyrs which were entering the edifice at the time.

We had often heard the notes of this production incident to the bringing forth of French liberty, but generally associated it with the bloody scenes in France during the revolution, and when it was rendered in the streets upon barrel-organs we were generally inclined to listen to it with horror, imagining we saw the unfortunate Louis the Sixteenth marching to the scaffold as well as his unhappy queen, Marie Antoinette.

But the notes which swelled forth in church on that Sabbath morn sent thrills through all present. It was a time when the allies were passing through a dark cloud with the outcome uncertain. Germany was pushing ahead, and it looked like Liberty was about to be crushed to the earth under iron and blood.

Times, however, have changed. After months of suspense, during which the merciful Maker has been invoked by our ministers for sucess to the allied arms, the throne eternal has listened, —and we behold, not Thor with his hammer, nor Mars with his sword, but, in the words of the Son of God, "Our Father which art in heaven."

Our prayers have been answered, and when we come together again tomorrow we should be filled with a spirit of thanksgiving. The children of Israel after they had passed through the Red Sea and witnessed the destruction of the Egyptians, sang "The horse and his rider has he cast into the Sea." Our poems of thanksgiving will be in order.

WOULD CONSERVE PAPER

Chairman Baruch of the War Industries Board yesterday made further their suggestions for the saving of paper. A large tonnage of paper and a great saving in chemical pulp would result from the following of these suggestions, he hinted.

These suggestions are as follows:

1. Write single space, except between paragraphs.

2. Write on both sides in case of long letters.

3. Use half or two-third sheets for short letters, if necessary, eliminate excessive advertising, long lists of officers and directors, etc., from letter heads, especially where changes are likely to occur.

4. Use 16-lb paper and the smallest sized envelopes required by the enclosure.

Use the backs of letters that are being answered as carbons.

6. Use post cards for acknowledgments.

7. Watch your waste baskets and use the spoiled sheet and backs of envelopes for scratch pads.

A cartoon in a contemporary a few days ago represented an editor in his sanctum with waste paper piled almost as high as his ears. An acquaintance who had entered observed, "Why you seem buried in paper. What's the matter?" The wielder of the quill replied, "Why I've been looking over government publications calling attention to an approaching scarcity of paper and requesting all to use as little as possible."

The cartoon expressed more than a volume. Most newspapers in the country receive dozens of circulars daily on war work, movements in this and that direction, all of which requires the use of much paper. Such documents are type-written upon one side only, and they furnish clippers and writers in more paper than they need. The blank sides of such productions are used in type-writers when editorials are needed, while reporters subject the missives to similar base usage.

The government could begin this crusade in its own departments.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION

The kaleidoscopic rapidity with which momentous events are occuring abroad, as shown by the collapse of Turkey and the near approach of Austria to a similar state, has brought a feeling of apprehension among Republican leaders in Washington that the masterful handling of the situation by President Wilson, as shown by these events, will be reflected at the polls Tuesday. Many of the Republicans are privately expressing the belief that the extremely favorable turn which the war situation has taken will give the Democrats a decided advantage in the Congressional elections.

If Germany should accept the armistice terms of the Inter-Allied War Council prior to the elections, political students in Washington believe that the enthusiasm which would sweep the United States would result in nothing short of a Democratic tidal wave. This feeling is not confined to the Democrats, but is freely voiced by many Republicans. A vote of confidence in the Wilson policies of such proportion as to swamp all opposition undoubtedly would be the result of a surrender by the Germans at this psychological moment.

Whether or not the actual breakdown of Germany occurs within the next few days, the fact that she will be isolated at an early date by the desertion of her allies, as foreshadowed in the dispatches, and the end of the war brought within sight, is likely to have practically the same political effect in this country. Though the Republican politicians share with Democrats the natural gratification of a victorious ending of the war brought near at hand, many are frankly worried about the effect on the political situation of the latest turn of events in the theatre of war

The Republican leaders never have approached an elecion with less confidence nor the Democrats with more than is the case now. Reports from all sections of the country indicate that President Wilson's appeal for the return of a Democratic Congress has been favorably received and is producing results. Even Republican leaders privately concede that the President has the confidence of the masses and the outcome of the elections depends on the extent to which this confidence is shaken by the concerted attacks made by former President Roosevelt, Chairman Hays, of the Republican National Committee, and other big guns.

HUN CONTINENTAL POLICY

Vorwaerts expresses the Gern decline and fall epigrammatica... when it says, "The continental po... of the German Empire has collap... The Hamburg-Bagdad line has b... reduced to the Hamburg-Bodenbach road. The Czecho-Slovaks have cut the railroad between Berlin and Vienna near Bodenbach, and German trains can go only as far as Schnadau. Bodenbach is in Bohemia, very close to the Saxon boundary. So this grandiose vision of German statesmanship and the General Staff, and the "pipe dreams" of German commercial magnates, come to an end a few miles outside of Germany.

Well, it was "world domination or decline" that Germany shouted as it plunged into the fray, and it comes out with one of the alternatives. As every one knows, there was never a more overwhelming national disappointment. Germany was fast attaining the commercial conquest of the globe. It had France beaten in the world of commerce. It was threatening the supremacy of Great Britain upon the seas and in South America and Asia. Its traders were the most serious obstacle to the expansion of our foreign trade.

As an exchange says, in a few years all the world would have been tributary to Germany in a commercial sense. But the military caste wanted to demonstrate what they had so long asserted, that they had the greatest army on earth. And the monarch was a victim of military mania, crazy enough actually to say that where Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon had failed he would succeed. Behind these was a nation intoxicated by the flattery of its university professors, drunk with the assurance of its military chiefs, and dazzled by the amount of wealth it had acquired in a generation, whose cupidity was aroused by the sight of all the wealth in the world which it had not yet secured.

So it started out to make the nearly completed route from Hamburg to Bagdad a base of operations for a triumphal march around the world. And now its through trains scheduled for the other side of the world can get no farther than Bodenbach.

BEREFT OF ALLIES

Germany may not yet be willing to confess before the world that it is beaten; it may not be ready to admit to itself that its might cannot at least keep its enemies from the frontiers, but it cannot deny to itself or to the world that it is now without a friend among the nations of the earth. It has not a comrade upon whom it may lean or an ally to which to turn for support. Bulgaria has deserted, Austria is appealing to the allies for a separate peace and Turkey has surrendered.

One wonders what the German people must think of themselves, of their military system, of their philosophy of force and their policy of ruthlessness when they contemplate their plight at this time. They cannot hold their government alone guilty of the crimes against civilization, which have arrayed more than twenty nations against them and dissolved every alliance which they had made. They must know, if they are capable of reflection, that they themselves have stood by that government, gloried in its brutality as long as brutality meant success and countenanced terrorism in all its forms as long as victory by such processes seemed possible.

They now have failed They have been defeated by the same force which they invoked; they have been mastered by the same militarism which they relied upon to dominate the world. Their enemies are about to reduce them to helplessness, after already having reduced them to hopelessness, and while the battle goes on one after another of their allies repudiates the covenants which bound them together. Not only are these alliances repudiated, but they are repdiated in hate. Bulgarians, Austrians, and Turks have turned against Germany. They have shaken themselves free of an oppressor. They have refused to fight longer the war that was Germany's war from the outset, and in the years to come their maledictions will be upon the nation that sought to sacrifice them to its own advantage.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE CRY OF CAESARISM

It is most diverting to see the two Republican ex-Presidents warning the country against Caesarism and a dictatorship and the menace to our liberties of submitting to the tyranny of Woodrow Wilson. As a contemporary says, the personality of the objectors makes this particularly delicious—or irritating. Theodore Roosevelt conducted the most personal Government we have had since Andrew Jackson, and William Howard Taft couldn't hold his own party together, to say nothing of making any impression on the opposition, and he was the worst-beaten candidate any of the great parties of the country ever ran. This is a fine pair of ducks to quack about the danger to our liberties in giving the Administration an overwhelming vote of confidence!

Mr. Roosevelt paid no attention to the Constitution or the Congress, and boasted of making the Panama Canal, with the help of a revolution arranged in Washington, and which Mr. Roosevelt would not allow Colombia to suppress, while Congress talked about it. Without any such necessity as a great war creates he forced his personality upon the country, merely in the exuberance of his self-conceit and his wilfulness.

Nearly 50 years ago The New York Herald was solemnly warning the country day after day for months of the Caesarism of General Grant. Grant and the political gang that ruled through him didn't care for much of anything except their own interests, but civil liberty survived, and there was enough independence in the country to refuse Grant a third term, even after his prestige had been new-gilded by the regal honors European Governments paid him on his grand tour.

This chatter about Caesarism is pretty threadbare, and, coming from the Republican ex-Presidents, it is scarcely amusing.

If You Have Trouble.

If you have trouble, forget it to think of the troubles awhile
That darken the hearts of your fellows that go with a song and smile;
For often beneath the singing there's an ache that alone they feel
Who have felt the brand of the battle, who have bowed to the yoke of steel.
If you have trouble, remember the times when your troubles are light
When you dance all day mid the bubbles that burn with beauty bright,
While others you envy are shadowed
so often with deepest care,
More than they bargained to garner,
more than they-re able to bear.
If you have trouble, take comfort from the services of sweetness and truth
That sympathy renders to others who are deeper than you in the ruth
That life has been raining upon them, while mayle your own seem small;
In their thought of their sorrow and service—you have no troubles at all.

AUSTRIA'S NEXT MOVE

General Diaz Sends Terms of Armistice—Captures Nearly 70,000 Prisoners Capitulation looked for at Any Time.

London, Nov 2—The next move is Austria's.

Gen. Diaz yesterday sent the Austrian white flag messenger back to the Austrian army command with a note containing the terms on which the request for an armistice will be granted.

These terms originate from the Versailles Supreme Council, where they were approved by all powers. They will be made public today.

It is entirely possible that Austria by this time has accepted the terms. Austria's choice is between immediate acceptance and military catastlysm.

Diaz's drive early yesterday was still in full swing The total of prisoners had risen to nearly 70,000, that of guns to more than 700. At last reports the Austrians had been thrown back to, and even across the Tagliamento.

All that the Austro-Hungarian army has been fighting for —or thought it was fighting for—is no more. The "empire" Austria is a republic and so is the "kingdom" of Hungary. The Emperor king, to whom the troops have sworn their allegiance, is a fugitive.

The red flag of revolution flies over the parliament building at Vienna, and another from the top of the Hungarian Diet building at Budapest. The hyphen between Austria and Hungary is a mockery of bygone days. The peoples have cut it.

Blood flows freely in street battles at the two capitals and in many other cities.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Austria's capitulation is expecte dmomentarily by officials here.

While the report that the allies had submitted terms of an armistice to the remnants of the dual monarchy lacked official confirmation last night, every one believes this to be the next logical step in the isolation of Germany. Precedent has already been established, it is said, by the manner in which the allies treated similar requests from Bulgaria and Turkey.

There is every indication here that the United States and the allies are in complete unity on every step, and also that the war is about to end.

Prince Hohenlohe, the German Ambassador at Vienna, and his staff had just time to get out of the city, homeward bound, before the riots started. The "alliance" is a thing of the past, and with its passing the diplomatic pillars have becomes jobless.

GERMANY'S CONDITION

Copies of Ludendorff's Appeals Found On Prisoners.

At the British Front, Nov. 2—One of Gen. Ludendorff's last official communications to the German army before he was forced out for playing politics read:

"We are falling back according to a pre-arranged plan, for our own good Fatherland is in danger, and I expect every man to do his duty."

"Don't lose your heads in case of capture. Don't give up any information, as it will benefit the enemy"

A copy of this appeal was found in the town of St. Leger

It is learned that after the reverses of the last few days the Germans have been given to understand that the whole of Belgium is to be evacuated by November 10.

Evidence that the German army's morale is steadily declining is found on all sides. In some quarters it is even believed that if the allied pressure continues and an armistice is not signed soon the German war machine may crack like the Russian.

Even the German airmen are losing their old-time cocksureness.

A sign found in an abandoned hangar in Belgium said:

"Welcome, Mister Tommy, bon, jour Messieurs les Francises. Don't shoot us any more than you have to, We are tired of war. Vive la Paix."

While these and similar signs of the enemy's weakening continue to pour in almost hourly, further translations of captured documents regarding the treatment of civilians in the occupied territory give the lie to Berlin's official denials of the last few days.

One document, dated September 30, signed by a district commandant, said:

"I find from personal experience today that in some quarters there still is uncertainty as to whether resting troops may claim rooms and beds belonging to inhabitants for their troops' exclusive use. The answer is a complete affirmative. Beds wherever found are to be taken unhesitatingly from the inhabitants for use in billets Further, all living rooms are at the disposal of the billeted troops The inhabitants are to be relegated to the floor."

"MADE IN GERMANY."

When William calculated that
His neighbors he could lick,
Because they were not watching for
His low down dirty trick,
A big mistake was "made in Germany.'
When William calculated that
The Belgians put no ice,
And that their little army was
A harmless nest of mice, big mistake was 'made in Germany.'
When William calculated that
John Bull was an old man,
And that the French remembered not
Napoleon and Joan,
A big mistake was 'made in Germany.'
When William calculated that
The universe held Hun
Before your Uncle Sam could grind
His sword or load his gun,
A big mistake was 'made in Germany.'
But wait until the Yanks arrive
And old Berlin they take—
For then the Huns will realize
The size of their mistake.
The big mistake was 'made in Germany."

OCTOBER

October, 1918, has been fraught with sadness because so many homes have been made desolate by the terrible scourge which has visited us. Emerson said, "Nature always wears the color of the spirit." All Nature has been calling to us to come to God's great outdoors and those who could obey her voice have been benefited thereby.

It was my privilege to take a long drive through the country about the middle of October, when the trees had put their glory on. It was the most radiant time—just before the leaves fall.

We saw such a variety of trees, the mighty oak, the tall pine, the fragrant cedar, the silvery beech, the yellow hickory, the crimson dogwood, the brilliant sweet gum, so many tints, crimson and gold, russet and brown, "All color teeming yet all colors blent" As if to compensate the somber pines the Virginia creeper had decked them with the most vivid crimson, which contrasts so beautifully with the dark green of the pines. On the roadside we saw the golden rod, the purple asters and the bright sumac with the gay company of trees, blending in hues which make the forest glad with their sunny colored foliage.

"Earth's greatest painters never could
Nor poet in inspired mood—
Imagine aught like this."

The day was perfect, the air just crisp enough to make it a delight to be out of doors. A purple haze was over all the landscape.

Lowell said, "What is so rare as a day in June?" I answer, "Naught that I know but a day in October."

"Or suns and skies and clouds of June
And flowers of June together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour
October's bright blue weather."

FOCH A GENIAL HOST

American Civilian Says Generalissimo Talked Rapidly and Smiled Frequently During Visit

London, Nov. 1.—"We found Marshal Foch in the center of a huge room bending over a big flat table, intently studying a map through a reading glass."

These are the words of one of the Few American civilians who ever met the Allied Generalissimo. For private reasons he would not permit his name to be used, but he described his visit to Foch's headquarters.

"The term 'Foch's headquarters' is perhaps misleading," he said, "because the Marshal moves about as his plans require.

"But his headquarters when I saw him was an enormous room on the second floor of a huge chateau in a quiet section of France. A moment after we entered, he put down his glass, turned and saluted and then shook hands most cordially.

"A captain with him, an elderly man, acts as his interpreter. Generally conversations through an interpreter are stilted. But the captain was such an excellent interpreter that our talk was free and natural.

"As the interpreter repeated our words in French the Marshal's eyes would twinkle and he seemed to be urging the captain to talk more rapidly with frequent quick expressions—'Oui! Ouo.!'

"Likewise he would smile and utter a quick, 'Oui!' when he caught a familiar word or two of English that gave him an inkling as to what we were saying to the interpreter.

"Gen. Foch is square-shouldered—you particularly notice that—and sturdily built. He is perhaps below medium height, but that isn't so apparent.

"His face is studious—that of a thinker, and he has a most resolute manner. His eyes are steady and keen and a mass of tiny deep wrinkles appear about his eyes when he smiles.

"When we left he put on his cap and came down stairs and outside with us, although we asked him not to.

"All over France General Foch is now regarded as greater than Napoleon—which is saying much, for France."

NEWS OF THE DAY

The body of Miss Margaret Dean, the 19-year-old employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, who disappeared from her home, 1253 K street, southeast, Washington, last Tuesday, was found yesterday floating in the river at the foot of Twelfth street southeast.

Terming it an attempt at labor conscription by intimidation and in effect a blacklist, the National Federation of Federal Employes yesterday filed a protest against Secretary Daniels' recent circular forbidding resignations from the Navy Department on penalty of the stigma "unpatriotic" against the employe's record.

A truce between the Republicans and Democrats of the Senate was arranged yesterday which will permit Congress to take a brief recess, beginning next Monday and ending November 12. It is understood that the Republican Senators who have blocked all attempts to have both Houses adjourn, will interpose no objection to the new plan.

Demobilization of the American forces in France after the war will require at least two years, according to a statement issued by Gen. T. Coleman DuPont, who has just returned from a two months' visit to the Western front. He conferred there with high officials of each of the allied governments and brought this estimate as the minimum expectation of the army officers.

It was predicted in authoritative quarters in Paris late yesterday evening that definite terms will be fixed by the Versailles Supreme Council before the week is over. In the same quarters it is conjectured that as soon as a full agreement has been reached on the terms a report will be transmitted to President Wilson for approval. The President will be requested, if he approves, to forward the terms to Germany, since the demand came through Washington.

VIRGINIA NEWS

Expressing general satisfaction in Postmaster General Burleson's promise of an early adjustment of the wage claims the electricians and operators of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company returned to work in Norfolk yesterday. The operations of the exchange were normal for the first time in 24 hours.

In order to aid in the work or fight campaign, 500 negro women of Norfolk yesterday volunteered to the Federal authorities to replace negro men employed in light manual work in office buildings, stores and industrial plants. Their wish to release the men for government work in the fifth naval district. A thousand others pledged to use their spare time in the work of rounding up slackers and loafers.

Only crippled traction and power services are promised Norfolk for the next four or five days owing to the breakdown yesterday of the big feed pump and the putting out of commission of two of the boilers at the company's main power plant. All trolley service ceased shortly after noon, industrial plants were forced to close and stores and buildings using electric lights during the day were in darkness for several hours as a result of the accident. Several days will be required to repair the breakdown.

A street riot occurred shortly before midnight in Norfolk Thursday night when a squad of policemen attempted to round up a number of sailors, charged with disorderly conduct, and attempting to loot stores. Patrolman A. T. Williams was instantly killed by a pistol shot. Six dangerously wounded sailors are in a precarious condition. A company of naval guards from the station and two companies of marines are now restoring order and rounding up all sailors on shore leave.

"Hempstead," one of the prettiest residences in the Green Mountain section of Albemarle county, was destroyed by fire at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Its owner, Royal C. Remick, formerly of Detroit, and a friend from Washington, D. C., the sole occupants of the building, escaped in their pajamas. The house was constructed at a cost of $35,000. The contents, which included some very rare furniture, was valued at $30,000. The loss is covered by $46,000 insurance. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective flue.

The success achieved in combating the malady was due, in the opinion of physicians, to the fact that every man fore a cloth mask during the voyage.
